

Diana Brozić

DMV, Ph.D.

Assistant Professor Diana Brozić has been working in the field of animal physiology and nutrition for the last 12 years. She has completed the residency program of the European College of Veterinary and Comparative Nutrition under the supervision of Professor Myriam Hesta at Gent University (small animal track) and is an eligible candidate to sit for the ECVCN diplomate exam.

She has participated as a lecturer in several international congresses and seminars. In addition to her teaching, research, and laboratory work, she actively performs service of small animals' nutritional support.

The areas of her scientific interest include animal nutrition and dietetics with a particular interest in clinical nutrition, intensive care nutrition, and gastrointestinal health of small animals.

She currently works as an assistant professor at the Department of Animal Nutrition and Dietetics at the Faculty of Veterinary Medicine, University of Zagreb